By Special Cable SHANGHAI, March 30—Although Shanghai is quiet today, a new cloud has arisen over China in the threat of foreign intervention. That the tax limit for the city of the most century of the next century, it is supported that intervention would be welcomed by the Communists as the quickest method to vindicate their anti-foreign propaganda and unite the country on their program. One observer pointed out that it software programs for the most experienced observer. The country is united as never before. Even Chang Tso-lin and the morthern war fords are on the verge of swinging into the knomintang and supporting the moderates. This unity would be quickly cemented with foreign intervention and China, for the first time in modern history, would be in a position to present a solid front against the West. Because of this and because the army is now relatively modern, the difficulties of intervention are much greater and many more troops would be required.

That the tax limit for the city of oston should be set at $12.50 instead of the $13 embodied in the bill reported by the committee on municipal finance and passed by the Legislature is recommended by Governor Fuller in a message which was read in the House today.

The Governor's recommendation represents a considerable reduction from the limit of $13.50 asked by Mayor Nichols, and an approach to the $11.40 limit which the Boston Finance Commission asserted would be sufficient. The Real Estate Ex-change and Henry F. Long, State

In the United States labor is scarce and conse-quently dear and natural resources are abundant and cheap and the United States, therefore, has been obliged to economize on labor and employ its natural resources and cap-ital lavishly. That means mass production or standardized production, so that few workers may handle a large amount of plant or large areas of land. In Europe on the other hand labor is relatively abundant and natural resources and capital relatively scarce, contrary economic courses are therefore indicated and indeed in a large measure inevitable. 'America could have had high wages 10 years earlier had we restricted immigration 10 years earlier,' the immigration 10 years earlier, the article, quoting Dr. Anderson, says in conclusion.

TREE PLANTING INTEREST GROWS

Vermont Forestry Department Gets Orders for About 2,000,000 Seedlings

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., March 30 Special)-Interest in the planting of in Vermont has increased

The variety for which the largest orders have been received is Norway spruce. Other varieties in their ranking order are white pine, red pine. Scotch pine, larch, white spruce, black locust and white cedar. Preparations for future tree sales are being made. This spring the department has arranged for sowing 400 pounds of tree seeds, from which it is estimated that the forest service should obtain 5,000,000 young trees ready for market within three years from the time of sowing.

At their March town meetings, several towns in the State voted to appropriate money for tree planting, widely this spring, judging by the number of ordere for seedlings which have been sent in to Robert M. Ross, Vermont Commissioner of Forestry, at Montpelier. Up to the present time, his department has received orders for approximately 2,000,000 trees which will be planted this spring. Most of the seedlings will come from the state nursery at Essex Junction.

Trees to the number of 100,000 will be set out in the state forests alone this spring as a part of the State's reforestation policy. These will be planted in the following reservations: Calvin Coolidge state forest at Plymouth, Ainsworth Forest Park in Williamstown, Charles Downer state forest at Sharon, Lyndon state forest

Creaking beams, swinging oil lamps, and the tramp of the watch overhead are all that are needed to complete the seagoing atmosphere which will pervade The Ship's Cabin, a hotel which is being constructed in Marblehead- for Charles H. W. Foster of Boston and Needham The hotel, which is of wooden construction, will accommodate approximately 50 guests. It will be opened by June 1.

The plans by Charles G. Loring, architect, show that the lobby will represent the main cabin of a commercial sailing vessel. In it will be a mast, while the woodwork will be patterned like a ship. There will be fixed seats along the bulkheads, according to Mr. Loring, with lockers and coamings in place of ordinary thresholds.

a parlor and dining room facing the water which, like the guest rooms on the entire second floor, will be furnished and decorated in the conventional hotel manner. In the dining room Mr. Foster plans to hang plctures illustrating the activities of the New England coast fishermen.

A wing extending back from each end of "The Ship's Cabin" forms an open quadrangle in which will be an oyster-shell drive with morning glories and other native flowers rambling among the seines and dorles of the Marblehead fishermen who land, their fare at adjoining wharfs. In permitting the fishermen to make their rendezvous on the hotel property, Mr. Foster believes that the atmosphere of the locality will be preserved in all its natural charm.

Before "The Ship's Cabin" is "launched" a figurehead—probably a representation of Columbia or some other member of Neptune's family—will adorn the gable overlooking the harbor.

Since there are no ashes to dispose of and no fuel to store and handle, fremen are not necessary. men are not necessary.

The idea that the Supreme Court was to act as the guardian of the rights guaranteed in the Constitution rights guaranteed in the Constitution as against infringement of these rights by a legislative body was fa-miliar to the members of th. Consti-tutional Convention and they ap-proved it, he asserted.

Question of Final Authority "Whether or not we agree with any particular decision is of no con-sequence," he declared in reference to recent proposals to weaken the authority of the Supreme Court. "What we must determine is whether we wish to submit all questions which may arise which affect our individual rights to an impartial ju-dicial tribunal, or to some other or-ganized body. Are we more willing to place our trust in the independent power of the judiciary, or in the un-restrained will of a representative legislature?"

The sixth and last lecture of the series being given under the terms of a lectureship established by the Senator's mother, Mrs. Robert Bacon, will be delivered on Friday in Jacob Sleeper Hall at 10 a. m., and will be open to the public.
"The Judiciary Act, providing for inferior federal courts, was passed

"Another proposal which has lately been seriously urged is that seven justices out of nine must concur to hold and act of Congress unconstihold and act of Congress unconsti-tutional. This obviously means that the opinion of three justices who de as conclusive rather than the opin-ion of six who decide against it— surely a glaring instance of minority rule.

After all the thunder of political debate has passed away, and the voice of the demagogue has been stilled, the people will come to appreciate that the Supreme Court is an institution ordained and established for their own benefit, and any subversion of its authority is against their own welfare. They have only to think of the innumerable instances in which their rights and liberties have been protected by it. If in some particular case they are dis-satisfied, surely this is not sufficient reason to destroy the instrumentality created for their security.

"The question which the American people must decide is whether they wish to maintain the guarantees of fundamental rights established in the Constitution for their own benefit. It they do, must they not, of necessity, rely upon the judicial power? Surely, restrictions upon the power of Con-gress are of little avail if Congress

World Alliance Secretary Says Rumanian Ministry

Special from Monitor Bursan

Dr. Rushbrooke declared that while he had been received with every courtesy, especially by the Prime Minister, General Averescu, he had been unable to obtain full liberty of preaching for the Baptist ministers, though Baptists regard the propagation of the Gospel as "an absolute religious obligation which they are unable to give up at the bidding of any secular authority."

Though he had failed to carry his main contention, Dr. Rushbrooke was glad to be able to report that General Average, and promised to General Averescu had promised to discuss with the Minister of Cults the question of closing chapels and (Aust.) headquarters of the Boy actions being illegal, according to the existing law in Rumania, as the Genral frankly admitted. In spite of this fact, Dr. Rushbrooke said, the Minister of Cults declared that his ministry offered the Baptists "liberty and justice," and that its attitude toward them was "generous." Dr. Rushbrooke was, however, able to cite two circulars, one of which had inadvert ently been published in the Ruma nian press. In this it was stated by the Cults Ministry: "With all re-strictions in our order No. 574 of 1925, we observe with much regret that the adherents of these sects (Baptists and Adventists) are growing. We send you again this decision and beg you . . . to direct your subordinates that besides the strict application of the regulations contained in the order, they shall put more zeal into the work of compating these sects." The other was from a local prefect, who, in transmitting this order privately to his subordinates, bade the latter see "that the development of these sects shall be hindered by well-chosen means ... and the results of their ropaganda annihilated."

"In the face of orders such as these," said Dr. Rushbrooke, "it is useless for the Ministry to insist that it is impartial." Dr. Rushthat it is impartial." Dr. Rush-brooke insisted that the present at-titude of the Rumanian Government directly contrary to its treaty digations. CANTONESE FIRE ON RIVER CRAFT

Anti-Foreign Agitation Is Spreading to Shantung, Says American Consul

WASHINGTON, March 30 (A)-Rewal of Americans from the long ches of the Yangtze River Valley of China was continued today to the accompaniment of constant firing from the shore at destroyers and other ships of refuge.

made most acute on the advance of the Cantonese Nationalist armies, Rear Admiral Williams, commanding the American forces in China, informed the Navy Department that the Cantonese were sending shots at the river craft from Nanking and from other points along the river.

Meanwhile there was apparent unessiness over conditions at Wulu, in Anhwel province, where anti-foreign outbreaks, such as that which took place at Nanking, were reported to be momentarily expected. Anti-foreign agitation was reported by A. G. Swaney, Consul at Tsinanfu, as having spread also to Shantung province, heretofore held by the northern Chinese troops. Tsinanfu was quiet, but the anti-foreign feeling also was in evidence there, the Consul said, and precautions were being taken for their protection.

Mr. MacMurray has ordered the American consolate there closed as soon as Americans in the district, which includes the provinces of Hunan and Kewichow, have left. An overnight message from Consul-General Lockhart at Hankow reported the situation there as quiet but tense. A total of 353 Americans was evacuated between March 24 and 27, but more refugees were continuously arriving from the interior.

On the 27th there were in Hankow 46 American missionaries, of whom 11 were women and nine children, and 93 other Americans, of whom 19 were women and eight children.

A brief message from Amoy sent at noon March 29 said quiet prevailed and local authorities gave assurance that order would be preserved. A seamen's strike is scheduled at Amoy for April 1.

Mr. Swaney reported via Peking today that an American citizen who left Pengpu on March 26 said that fighting was expected near that place. It is noted here that the agreement recently negotiated with Eugene Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister, for a mixed Sino-British municipality at Hankow, does not indicate that the British Crown has abandoned its claim to exercise sovereignty in the concession. British Government is seriously considering not only the question whether the measures already taken for the defense of Shanghai are a dequate, but also whether the time has not come to revise the present relationships with the southern Chinese Government.

Now that it has been definitely established that the Cantonese troops were withdrawn by a bugie call immediately the barrage of British and American naval guns commenced, it is impossible to contend that the soldlers were out of hand when they looted the consulates, and when they looted the consulates, and in the possibility of attempts on the part of the Southern Army to take a similar action at Shanghai cannot, therefore, be excluded, in the opinion of Downing Street commentations.

But Britain still has a number of troops at Hong Kong which are available for immediate dispatch to Shanghai, and it is hoped the well-come co-operation which has now been established between the powers will facilitate the task of protecting the lives and property of foreigners. In this connection, the increased degree of international unity evidenced in the past few days has greatly encouraged the British Government, which felt keenly the fact that it has recently been playing in many respects a lone hand in China. The question of diplomatic contact with the Nationalist Government is also being carefully reviewed at Downing Street in the light of the latest developments at Nanking and Hankow. At present the British Government, is officially represented in the later city by Eric Teichman, one of the secretaries of the Peking legalism to considered likely in informed delivered at Charlotte, N. The Friendly Cow a Dependable Help to Former Wheat Farmers

Bourbon County, Kansas, Being Transformed by

Organized Dairy Industry, While Cows Even

Pay for Good Roads

Special Correspondence
Special Correspondence
The result of the dairy movement was first seen in the building of roads. Other counties in Kansas, have had great difficulty in getting them to Fort Scott, hired men to milk them, and sold the milk just to show the possibilities of dairying in road-building started, while many of them have built no improved in the way of improving agriculture when town and country combine in pushing a dairy program. Where a long time since Fort Scott had had any use for a Chamber of Company of them have built no improved them have built no improved them have built no improved the producting cattle.

The result of the dairy movement was first seen in the building of roads. Other counties in Kansas, the built some time ago, freshness is the basic policy. Beauty is pretty well outside the question with the ponderous or grandiose structors or grandiose struc been laid for a permanent system of farming, and thousands of her kind are grazing on the old wheat lands in that region. Much remains to be done in the way of educating the farmers about improving their newly formed herds, but there are probably few counties in the United States that have shown such a rapid dairy development and resultant rural im-provement in so short a period of time. One cow-testing association time. One cow-testing association has been formed, and others are in the process of formation. Though most of the animals for these dairy farms were at first shipped in from other states, the farmers are now developing their own herds.

The dairy-hard-surface-road develment program in the county was fathered by the Fort Scott Chamber of Commerce. The movement started in 1915, and for several years the organization spent the greater part of its thought and energy in direct-ing the work. H. A. Russell, secretary of the association, says: "Bour-bon County has revolutionized its agriculture during the last 10 years. This change did not come about by accident, nor has it been accomplished in a day. The program was carefully planned 10 years ago and has been followed by the bankers, business men, members of the Cham-ber of Commerce, and the farmers of the county. In 1915, when the dairy movement actually got under way there were only five high-grade herds of dairy cattle in the county. Today there are approximately 500. The size of the dairy herds varies, but the average seems to be from 12 to 15. Holsteins predominate, but there are a great number of Jerseys and Guernseya." and Guernseys.'

Dairy Movement Spreads merce. but one was now organized to push the dairy industry. The directors of the newly reorganized association, together with the Farm Bureau agent, and a number of influential farmers and business men, outlined a 10 years' program of agricultural development and road building. They did not appeal to Congress or to the State Legislature to give them relief, but undertook to work out their own salvation. The dairy movement has extended from Fort Scott all over the county and to the neighboring counties Thirty trucks are hauling milk for the condensery and there is a prevailing note of satisfaction in the entire atmosphere. Last year some 900 farmers sold $500,000 worth of milk to the condensery alone. This is an average of $550 a farm, but the story is better than that for the average is pulled low because many of the farmers who engage in the dairy industry do so only incidentally, selling but a small amount of milk. The major portion of the $500,000 went to farmers who receive from $1000 to $4000 a year. One of the heaviest contributors to the factory is B. Little. Little came to Fort Scott from West Plains, Mo., three years ago, starting in the dairy business with 30 head of grade Jerseys and Guern-seys. He has since increased his herd to 50 milkers that produce about 1200 pounds a day. His monthly milk check is about $700. What is probably a more typical what is probably a more typical herd, however, is that of J. Harold Cowen. His nine Guernsey cows each bring him an average of $200 a year as his annual milk checks average $1800. Some of his animals produce $1800. Some of his animals produce more than 10,000 pounds of milk.

Many Similar Communities

The story of how this transformation was brought about is interesting, for there are no doubt many one-crop communities in the United sing, for there are no doubt many one-crop communities in the United States that could economically diversify their system of farming by the addition of dairy cows to the farm enterprise. Among those taking the lead were R. S. Tiernan, president of the Central Life Insurance Company; J. C. Hicks, merchant and president of the Chamber of Company in starting a night at Fort Scott and was Company; J. C. Hicks, merchant and president of the Chamber of Com-merce; H. A. Russell, secretary of merce; H. A. Russell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, a farmer, "cow milker" (in Kansas they still call a dairyman a cow milker) and a graduate of the Wisconsin State University, and George W. Marble, University, and George W. Marble, editor of the Fort Scott Tribune.

All four of these men were active in educating the farmers of that county to the value of the dairy cow, but Mr. Marble was perhaps the most influential in bringing about the change, for he early made a visit to Wisconsin to learn at first hand how the farmers and business men there were getting along. He discovered that Wisconsin farmers, in common with farmers in other dairy sections of the northern states, were suffering no agricultural depression, depleted to the point where profitable sections of the northern states, were suffering no agricultural depression, such as that which periodically struck the farmers in his home.

He found that dairymen in the returns from them by paying the returns from the r county. He found that dairymen in the North were prosperous, their crop yields were large and growing the taxes and keeping up the inlarger, their soil was fertile, pay days came often, and good roads less, farm values were decreasing, were being introduced everywhere. He became convinced that the dairy and falling into bad repair. cow was largely responsible for these conditions and determined that a program of farming that could make a state so far north as Wisconsin prosperous could, with modifications, be applied to Bourbon County with good results.

The Newspaper Helps

In telling of Marble's influence, Mr. Russell said, "He returned to Fort Scott a convert to the dairy coy. The Fort Scott Tribune became a dairy paper. Mr. Marble wrote not only editorials and news items, but letters advocating dairy farming. Furthermore, he purchased some tented people is coming true. The improved conditions and dependable prosperity which has followed these years of initial effort have fully justified the time, money and labor expended. We are now planning a 20-year program of soil building, crop rotating, road construction, developing an actual center of milk production and the breeding of high-producing cattle.

When we know that the furniture in workroom and staff lunchroom can't last many years longer, or when it is a hodge-podge of different fin-ishes and ages, why can we not be as daring as some few librarians and apply gay paint to take off the dullness and sense of depression and to reconcile the old pieces of furniture to each other? Why is Chinese red or orange or green any more out of place in the drab parts of a library than in shops and tea-rooms? Oilcloth is still to be found in some library staff rooms!

Substituting Spaciousness In rehabilitation a sense of spass is a fair substitute for architectural changes which cannot be afforded. Vistas, if there are any, should be preserved. "Nothing on window-sills," is the safest motto there can be for a library. More and more libraries are pushing their "slipping" of uncarded books to some place other than the charging desk, where the seeming confusion and untidy routine will not be vis-ible to the borrowers. The Library Bureau reports that many larger libraries are using such concealed discharging with greater efficiency and with incalculable gain in dig-nity and quiet. Among such libranity and quiet. CITY MANAGER PLAN

Mayor Indorses Proposal; City to Decide April 5

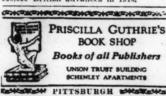

DALLAS, Tex., March 30 (Special) campaign in this city is whether the present commission form of govern-ment shall be changed to the city manager plan. While a clear-cut de-cision may not result in the election April 5, at least a fair indication of the voters' attitude is expected.

Louis Blaylock, serving his secon term as Mayor, has given unqualified indorsement to the city manager plan. The city Democratic party, one of five tickets in the field, without committing itself to the plan, has in-cluded in its platform a plank for the submission of a charter amendment for such a change, passing it up to the people, at a later date.

The Nonpartisan party declares for a citizens' advisory committee to assist in running the affairs of the municipality and proposes that this committee investigate the plan and give its recommendations to the city officials. D. C. McCord, candidate for Mayor on the Citizens' Independent ticket, is strongly advocating the plan in his stump speeches.

There are three of 8000 tons actually afloat and four others of 10,000 tons in a many-sided municipal election which will soon be ready for service. The French urge that for a country which has a large colonial empire seven cruisers is certainly not excessive. There are two older cruiser

It is pointed out that Germany, which has no colonial possessions, will in a few years have an autho rized fleet of six up-to-date light cruisers. Italy in 1929 will have nine. Japan, in the same year, will have eight. According to the figures given in France, England has nine light and rapid cruisers, and has 23 others in course of construction or on the naval program, and has other vessels not so modern which bring the

It cannot be expected, say the French, that France—greatly inferior in capital ships—should dispossess itself of the lighter ships to which it has devoted its attention. There is no desire to enter into competition with anybody. Such ships as France

SHORT WAVES EASILY HEARD ON CONVERTER

Ingenious Device Utilizes Present Radiocast Receiver Audio

Occasionally a device comes to our attention which shows decided ingenuity. The one to be described is not only ingenious, but a practi-cal and economical solution of the cat and economical solution of the problem of receiving both short and radiocast wavelengths. This unique unit was designed by Perry Graffam, who describes its idea and construction in two articles, this being

For the radio fan who wishes to explore the short-wave band from 15 explore the short-wave band from 15 to 125 meters, several ways are provided. However, the plans thus far advanced require changing the connections of the present radiocast receiver to suit the requirements of the short-wave set. Any such arrangement has its drawbacks. All the family may not be contented to listen for any considerable period to the short-wave reception. Once the family may not be contented to listen for any considerable period to the short-wave reception. Once changed, by the time the receiver is restored to normal the program most desired has probably been radiocast. What is desired to obviate such a difficulty is some device which can effect the necessary changes quickly. Any radio receiving set may be converted instantly, and at will, into a short-wave receiver by the use of the short-wave converter. It is only necessary to disconnect the serial and ground wires from the receiving set proper and attach them to the two binding posts of the short-wave converter. The detector tube of the receiver is placed in tube socket of converter and the cable plug from the converter is inserted in the detector socket of the receiving set. No other tubes are removed, no battery wires are disturbed, and the loud-speaker remains as usual. The tuning controls on the receiving set itself are not used. The tuning is all done from the one dial on the converter.

Easy to Bulld

Easy to Bulld

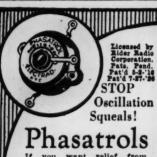

This short-wave converter is as easy to build as it is to operate. Its novelty embodies neither trick circuits nor trick apparatus. It is inexpensive to make and it will give satisfactory results. The device in reality is a short-wave set, comprising a regenerative detector and an attachment plug for connecting it to the audio end of the present receiving set and to the battery method of connecting the two units together is novel. It con sists of a five-conductor Birnback cable (two leads not used) and an old vacuum tube base for the plugglass of the old vacuum tube is broken off and the base cleaned out. Three wires from the cable are soldered to the terminals inside the base, one to the A plus, one to the A minus and one to the plate termi-

To identify these terminals, hold the tube base with the side pin to-ward you. With the base in this position, the two rear posts are A position, the two rear posts are A plus and A minus, respectively, and the left-hand front post is the plate terminal. The base of the tube is now filled with some wax compound such as the top of a discarded "B" battery. This is easily done, Place small pieces of the wax in the tube base and with a hot iron melt them together. When the tube base is full set it aside to cool.

shown in the diagrams. A condenser of especially low minimum capacity is used to tune the secondary coil in the converter, and with a set of three colls this con-denser will tune over a wave band extending from 15 to 200 meters. A vernier dial is a necessity on the verner dial is a necessity on the tuning condenser, as the tuning will be found to be very sharp. Bus bar wire may be used, but the writer has found it more desirable when wiring a set to use colored flexible wire properly covered, the colors serving the purpose of identifying the various con-nections.

He called attention to the fact that if the band were widened WASHINGTON—A chart has been prepared by the radio section of the Bureau of Standards for simplifying calculations of the relation between the constants of tuned radio circuits, i. e., inductance, capacity, and frequency. Mr. Langley stated that there is no necessity for any additional channels. He said that if the band was increased it would materially raise the cost of receiving sets, perhaps as much as 50 per cent. He said further that it would make the present sets obsolete as well as those held in stock and those in process of manufacture.

Mr. Kolster told the commission that the effect of widening the band inspection of the chart. Frequency and capacity values are plotted on logarithmic paper. -A retrograde step has been taken by the Minister for Justice, Kevin O'Higgins, with regard to women on juries. He attempted to eliminate them altogether from the panel, but as a result of strong protests made by a number of representative women, he has agreed to include in the jurie; lists all those women who the juror's lists all those women who signify their desire to serve by making formal application.

This proposal is an entirely new departure. As the women, who went on a deputation to the Minister, pointed out, to establish a volunteer system of jury service for women while a compulsory system exists for while a compulsory system exists for men will not serve any useful purpose, and can only lead to administrative complications which will react against the interests of women, and at the same time will fall to achieve the end which the Minister has in view. If a similar system were applied to men, not more than a handful of jurors would be forthcoming to try all the cases in the country.

Equal Rights Claimed

It is contended that as the Free State has bestowed on women equal rights of citizenship with men, this entails equal duties, and strong exception has been taken by the women's organizations to the Minister in support of his proposal is that it would avoid "unsavory cases" being heard by women. This argument, however, carried no weight, as it was pointed out by Mr. Johnson, the leader of the Labor Party and several of the independents, that women can be called as witnesses, barristers, and solicitors in such cases, and the women's representatives reply that as these cases generally involve a woman on'a child, they should not be dealt with by men only, if justice is to be done. The women who lobbied the members or the Dail pressed for equal conditions of jury service, including equal grounds for exemption, for men and women, as the only sound and equitable basis, but despite the strong protests of Labor and Independent members inside the Dail and the women's organizations outside, the Minister for Justice only yielded to the extent of altering his proposal of exclusion to one of volunteer service.

WOMEN CLAIM on the panel, although they could claim exemption by the simple process of making a formal application for it. They also complain of the

Undue Expense

When the point of undue expense was debated upon in the Dail, it was found to be illusory, as the special accommodation necessary for women jurors in any case have to be provided for women solicitors and barristers, and the official reply of the women's organizations declared that "the trifling expense incurred, directly or indirectly, cannot honestly be set against the principle of common justice and public duty."

A further reason given by the Minister in support of his proposal is that it would avoid "unsavory cases" being heard by women. This

Many Reverses Haydon, who is always elaborately introspective, traces his "downfall" to various missteps scattered about his career. Though he had in truth not one downtall, but many. His career was made up very largely of downfalls, with corresponding rebounds to the loftlest altitudes. One day it is the debtors' prison, another, dinner with the Duke of Wellington; another, the desertion of his patron, the next an evening in his studio with Keats, Shelley. HRISTOPHER, cats and mountains, thoughts on neighbors, Vermont roads, and literature fill the pages of Zephine Humphrey's narrative of a customed to resort. Nevertheless a high-vaulting genius, such as Haydon possessed, needs the moderating accompaniment of good common sense, and of this quality he was quite innocent. Indeed he wrote his autobiography as a warning to the rising generation of what happens to the man who tries to manage with-

He began his "Solomon"—two years' work—without a penny in his pocket, £600 in debt, and with no pocket, £600 in debt, and with no definite prospect of selling it when done. With his usual buoyancy he took his landlord, his restaurateur, and such tradesmen as he would have to call upon, in to see the beginnings of the picture, told them in his irresistible way what a pity it would be for such a masterpiece to fail for want of food and lodging, and the kind-hearted men relented—with somewhat uncertain prospects somewhat uncertain prospects

Benjamin Bebert Haydon, edited by Addous Huxley. New 1602: Harcourt Brace & Co. 3 vols. $7.50.

Then Benjamin Haydon, the artist, terminated his somewatt turbulent career in 1846, he bequeathed to the world an incomplete autobiography and a number of immense historical canyase—executed as he tells us, in the "grand style," and designed to "refine the taste, to enlighten the understanding of the English people." Whether or not the pictures fulfilled the jlotty function to which they were dedicated, they at all events now repose for the most part in the storage vaults of various galleries, forgotten. But the autobiography is not forgotten, nor is it likely to be, for Haydon, whatever may have been his deficiencies as a painter, was an autobiographer with few equals in English literature. The manuscript of this work, together with the 26 bulky folios of the artist's diary, fell into the hands of Mr. Tom Taylor, a lawyer of the Inner Temple, and were together published some 75 years ago. They have now been reprinted; and such good reading do they make, so rich are they in every quality of interest, and so deliciously written, that one would not be at all surprised if readers of the autobiography were to insist that these buried expanses of canvas be brought up from their vaults that they may examine for themselves the heads, napes, wrists and torsos that had cost their harassed designer so many weeks of mingled joy and torment to paint.

a half (the half a little girl). Exquisite taste of the English people! O God! Bless me through the evils of this day.

Musing Napoleon

Haydon's happiest venture was a picture of Napoleon, standing on a cliff, contemplating the ocean. Immediately, the demand for Napoleons in contemplation was immense, and the artist turned them out in large quantities. This time the diary adopts an optimistic note:

20th. Worked gloriously, and got in Napoleon in Fontainebleau Garden. Three musings—Fontainebleau—Bedroom—Ocean.
23d. Worked hard, and got another Napoleon done, musing the night before his abdication, 1814.

By Heavens! How many more?

Happily, all that the delightful Haydon has left us to read is virtually comprised in these two autobiographical volumes. One begrudges the time and energy devoted to the brush that might have been turned to the pen. Yet, after all, have not the paintings formed the materials for this masterly self-portrait? What would the autobiography have been without them?

Mr. Aldous Huxley has contributed an introduction to the work, cleverly written, but surely rather coldly analytical in its treatment of so warmly human, so kindly and appealing a subject.

SENATOR CARTER GLASS has turned a 100-ton gan upon the somewhat puny defensive work thrown up by Professor Beymour in support of his theory that Colonel House was the true originator and chief champion of the Federal Reserve Act. The way in which "The Intimate Papers of Coionel House" were edited by the Yale professor to the house was the true originator and an object lesson and a warning to public men to be careful in the selection of their biographers, for there was little in the electric of the could have ayoused the very wide could have ayoused the very wide appread and not altogether unjustifiable criticism which the book itself brought forth. Professor Seymour's tilterary method was such that it was siffling to the theory that Colonel House was the most egotistical of men. Those who know him best know well that this is in, no sense his character, and such persons have deplored the form which was given to his papers by their editor.

Federal Reserve Act one notable error was the effort to ascribe to Colonel House both the parentage of the Federal Reserve Act and the political advocacy which carried it to success. Neither of these achievements is properly to be credited to the Texas statesman. Senator of Glass refers to the assertion as "an astounding pretension." and the phrase is none too strong. The Hero of Trafalgar

E IS a bold writer who will attempt to explore the men-tal make-up of a sea-salt. The plain, everyday sailor is a sufficiently knotty problem for a terrestrial portraitist; but when to the usual nautical qualities is added the genius of a Nelson, the prospects of a satisfactory picture are highly uncertain. Perhaps the best to be hoped for is shipman under his uncle, Captain see the identity of the law of gravitaa complete collection of discoverable Suckling, at the age of 12, between the complete collection with purity of heart; and shall which event and Trafalgar, when he show that the Ought, that Duty, is discern the original, if he can. Mr.

Corbett-Smith is on the whole as successful as might have been expected. And if in his portrait we may fail to trace the lineaments of a complete Nelson, yet the material itself is interesting, and perhaps we are just as well pleased that the genius remains a genius, a thing without parts or magnitude, entirely inaccessible.

In short, the author is not an unpleasantly penetrating portraitist. He gives his subject credit for some invancible qualities, and, unlike most concemporary biographers, he genuinely admires his hero. This is as it should be. Nelson was the commanding genius, the master tactician, the man of incalculable resource and determination who contributed much to save England, if not Europe, from the grasp of Napoleon. He destroyed every ship that could conceivably help carry the Grande Arméa across the Channel. He was as truly the emblem of a new hope and confidence in the British race as was George Washington for the young American nation. In this respect he deserves the Englishman's loyalty and gratitide.

Nelson's gifts to his country jay in his four great defensive sea fights, and in his solicitude for the welfare of the common saliors. Till Nelson appeared, the misnamed "jolly tars" had been forcibly dragged from the prisons and highways by the pressions and highways by the pressions and miserably treated aboard.

Through his influence they became respected, self-respecting citizens, "free men fighting for freedom."

"free men fighting for freedom."

This was the work of Nelson, the captain and admiral. Ashore his picture may not be so heroic. It was, as all the world knows, tarnished by the affair of Lady Hamilton. But whether there be any great significance or profit in investigating this brief section of his career may well be doubted. Nelson became a mid-

As he approached the capital—so the story goes—he happened to pass near a garden where three of the Shah's favored poets were seeking recreation. Seeing the stranger draw near, and fearing that his presence might interfere with their

"Here we are," they said to him,

One of the three thereupon com-verse with a word supposed to have no rhyme. That, of course, was the catch! For it was now the stranger's turn. Our poet rose gloriously to the occasion, responding instantly with a graceful verse that ended with an admirable rhyme for the unrhymable: The other three were amazed and delighted, extending to him at once the hand of fellowship and later recommending blor to the national state.

Then, icle had fallen into the hands of the too, there is nothing austere about poet who mused by the waterside too, there is nothing austere about it; it reflects the sunshine of the country in which it was written. "The 'Shah Nameh' is pervaded by an antique grandeur mingled with what might be called a modern spirit, but which is the expression of its intense truthfulness to human nature, the element that renders it of and for all time." Because its author avoided the profuse ornamentation and elaborate imagery characteristic of most Oriental writers, the Western reader finds himself in an atmosphere less exotic, more congenial, than that of other literature of the East.

So wasser are the authorities and many the ministrelsy. The fame of his verse reached the court of Shah Mahmoud, a royal behest demanded his presence

So meager are the authentic records of this sweet singer, that we must needs piece out the scant facts with half-legendary fragments; but let the imagination play even with half-legendary fragments; but let the imagination play ever so slightly upon these fragile bits, and a charming picture of the gentle poet emerges. We are told that at the birth of Mansur ibn Ahmad, known to us as Firdusi, his father— whose name even has been lost— dreamed that he saw his infant son standing with his face to the west and lifting up his voice, the echo standing with his face to the west and lifting up his voice, the echo of which resounded from all parts of the world. The interpretation is ob-vious, and the father, thrilled no doubt by the promise of his small spn's future greatness, provided for him every advantage that the times and place allowed. We can readily picture the joy with which early evi-dences of an eager interest in learndences of an eager interest in learn-ing and a special aptitude for poetry were observed in the growing boy We see him—at the family home in Tus, province of Khorasan—musing beside the canal that watered his father's grounds. This humble canal, destined to play so large a part in the poet's history, is thus exalted for us far above the sphere of mere-utility—it becomes a golden stream-let upon which the fancy lingers with delight! Here he used to spend hours delight! Here he used to spend hours in deep reverie,—dreams that were to bear glorious fruitage in verse that the Persian husbandman even today chants as he tills his field. This canal was fed by an adjacent river, and would sometimes run dry when floods carried away the river's earthen dikes. The young poet, lamenting the damage that resulted, longed for the day when he might hence this fellow-townsmen by replacing the untrustworthy earthen work with dikes of stone.

Ighted, extending to him at once the hand of fellowship and later recommending him to the patronage of the Shah. Arriving at the court, he was sommanded to improvise a poem in the royal presence. Here again he acquitted himself so well that the Shah exclaimed with fervor, "You have made my court as resplendent as Firdus," (i. g. Paradise). Hence his name, Firdus, singer of Paradise.

To Firdusi alone, then, was intrusted the execution of the Shah's rk with dikes of stone.

But no, Firdusi chose to wait for payment until the entire poem was finished, hoping that he might then realize his other dream—the building of the stone dikes at Tus.

For three and thirty years the work went on, and finally the last of the sixty thousand couplets was written—But "fickle as a changeful dream" proved the royal favor. The Shah, though appreciative of the splendor of the great work and of the luster that it would add to his name, yet-Itudes, at length found a haven in his native Tus, where in his cool, green garden, among the associations of his youth, he passed the years as quietly and obscurely as if he had never basked in the sunshine of royal favor. And still we climbed, Upward into those sheer and threatening cliffs Storming against the sky.

As though to stop our impudent assault,

The sun laid great hot hands upon our backs, And bent them down.

There were no bluff, good-humored winds to push us on;
There were no shrubs to grasp, no staff to aid:

Laughter was all we leaned on.

And laughing still, we drew long, panting breaths; And our pulses jumped with a proud and foolish thrill, As though we had gained not merely the top of a hill, But a victory.

But a victory.

Up here the gaunt earth seemed to sprawl,
Stretching its legs beyond the cramping skies,
And lie upon its cloudy back and yawn.
Rhythmical breezes arose,
Like a strong man awaking from sleep,
Like the measured breathing of Day.
And the earth stirred and called us.
An unseen path sprang from the undergrowth,
And dodged among the bushes lightly, beckoning us on;
Vine-snares and rocks made way for us;
Dalsies threw themselves before our feet;
The eager little armies of the grass,
Waving their happy spears, ran on beside us:
And when we alackened, when we thought of resting,
The running grasses stopped, the earth sank back into itself,
Became a living pillow, a soft breast,
And every branch held out its comforting arms.
The winds pressed close, and, growing gantle, sang to us;
And so we sat heneath the mothering trees.

ANNUAL REPORT SHOWS GROWTH

Ideals of Sportsmanship Brotherhood Gradually Permeating the U.S.

Special from Monitor Bureou NEW YORK, March 30—The ideals fair play and obedience to the rules, rather than the taking of any possible advantage, are gradually permeating the United States, according to the report of Dr. James E. Rogers, director of physical education of the Playgrounds Association, who has just completed a tour in the various states where the brotherhood is organized. A number of similar statements, all fully justifying the organization and spread of the brotherhood, were made at the annual meeting at the Town Hall yesterday. Among the speakers to express similar views were Maj. A. H. Proctor, whose work as head of the American Legion has been greatly aided by the brotherhood, and Dr. John C. Wilce, on behalf of the American Football Coaches' Association, who stated that the spectators needed the air play and obedience to the rule aided by the brotherhood, and Dr. John C. Wilce, on behalf of the American Football Coaches' Association, who stated that the spectators needed the slogan of the brotherhood even more than the players in both football and basketball, in which he is the coach at Ohio State University.

Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, was re-elected president and most of the other officers, including Daniel Chase, executive secretary, Capt. Percy R. Creed, Col. Henry Breckenridge, president of the National Amateur Athletic Federation; Murray Hulbert, president of the Amateur Athletic Union; E. K. Hall, chairman of the Football Rules Committee, were also re-elected as directors. Devereux Milburn, captain of the International polo team of the United States, testified to his interest in the work of the brotherhood by making a special trip from Alken, S. C., where the team is practicing for the summer events, to be at the meeting. He was also re-elected as third vice-president and a director.

Special from Menitor Bureau

NEW YORK, March 30—Boston easily defeated Chicago in the first semifinal playoff game of the United States section of the National Hockey League at Madison Square Garden last night, scoring 6 goals to 1. This gives Boston a margin of five goals for the second game, to be played at the New Eoston Arena tomorrow.

Chicago tried many combinations, with eight different centers officiating at various times, but only Edward Rodden, a recent recruit from Minneapolis was able to break the sturdy defense of Boston. His pass to Fraser accounted for the only score of the Black Hawks.

accounted for the only score of the Black Hawks.

Boston proceeded to settle the game in the opening period, Traub of Chicago opened the first chance, when he was ruled off for tripping and Fredrickson went through the defense for a goal a few seconds later. Then, after a series of penalties had been assessed against members of both teams, a combination attack by Cleghorn and Galbraith gave the Boston captain a goal for his team, and Herberts, a moment later, dashed alone along left wing and scored the third. The second period found Chicago trying to overcome the Bad. Practically every member of the forward line, both regulars and spares, took a try at center, but the only score came when Rodden passed to Fraser.

Fredrickson added another goal to the Boston total on a pass from Shore. Chicago had one good chance when penalties sent two Boston players off ice, but a tight defense spoiled it.

Canadiens Held to Tie by Montreal 1-1 NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

MONTREAL, Que., March 30 (Special)—The World Champion Montreal Maroons, who failed to show their expected form during the recent National Hockey League schedule, gave their best exhibition of the season here last night when they met Canadians in the first of the semifinal games for the Canadian group title and held their local rivals to a 1-to-1 the which leaves the issue very much in doubt and depending upon the second game tomorrow night.

and depending upon the second game tomorrow night.

Canadiens were strong favorites to win, but they found the Maroons strong in every department and players who have been playing below expectations of late rose to the occasion by playing brilliantly. The three veterans of the team, Benedict, Noble and Broadbent, along with Stewart, played their best hockey of the season and consequently the Canadiens' speedy and brilliant offensive was steadily worn down by smashing up against a strong Montreal defense.

The Maroons used their bodies with telling effect and gradually the Canadiens became somewhat disorganized and toward the end of the game the champions had the best of the play and almost scored several times.

The Canadiens scored their only goal three seconds before the end of the first period, Joliat taking a pass from Morenz and shooting from the wing, the puck bounding over Benedict's stick for a goal. In the second period Canadiens were weakened by penalties and the tyling goal was scored by Seibert after a face-off when the The annual five-game series of the Philadelphia National and American League clubs will start April 2 at Shibe Park, Philadelphia.

Minneapolis qualified to play Duluth for the American Hockey Association Championship by defeating Winnipeg,
2 to 1, here last night. The victory gave the millers three straight victories in the semifinal playoff.

No team this season scored a more fortunate victory on local ice than Minneapolis did last night. The Maroons outplayed them almost every minute of the last two periods, but could not get a "break," while Minneapolis scored the winning goal in the second period on a long shot by Adams from center ice, the puck hitting Munro's leg and glancing into the corner of the net after Gardiner had the shot completely covered.

The first period and early minutes of the second were marked by brillivat hockey. The Maroons opened the second period with a terrific bombardment and tied the score. The Millers would not play hockey and for the last two periods they kept shooting the puck up the ice. This marred the contest, although it proved effective. The

With respect to the situation in the West, there has been little change reported during the last week. There has been some buying here and there of a small clip on contract of late, at prices generally a cent or so under the peak prices paid in the Northwest, but for the most part the growers are unwilling to shade prices very much.

The export movement has not assumed the proportions of 1924 and 1925, when an average of 25,000,000 pounds of wool suitable for clothing purposes were exported each year, but there is no doubt that sales for export have increased in the last few weeks. One agency is credited with having rounded up something like 3000 bales for export, mostly of Australian merino wools. These have included wools mostly in the 90 cent levels, such as fairly good combing 64-70s at about 96@97 cents, and some averages 64-70s at about 92 vents, while some very good French combing 64s are reported to have been sold at 14005 cents. Five Prospects

In pursuance of a sound editorial policy established 25 years ago by The Finan-cial World to make of America a nation of intelligent investors by telling how to distinguish and purchase basic values, there was published in its Octo ber 23, 1926, issue a group of 5 listed common stocks. That list was compiled after an exhaustive investigation in order to forcibly bring to investors' attention the salient fact that if they wished to engage in a speculative venture it was not necessary to include in blind gambles, "tips" or to listen to the illusive "get-richquick" promoters.

The purpose of this article was to show there are, at times, legitimate opportunities in non-income yielding securities in established and growing enterprises listed on the Stock Exchange, offering attractive speculative prospects—prospects based on tangible values. The soundness of this fundamental theory of buying values, whether for investment or speculation, is graphically demonstrated by the profits this list has realized for subscribers since it was published—a profit of $2,090 if only 20 shares of each had been purchased as recommended. This list comprised the following five

The profitable results from this careful selection is only spyical of the dependence that can be placed on the yardstick of values which has repeatedly been demonstrated by the Bargain Lists. Fourteen of these lists already have appeared in The Financial World—the last in the January 29, 1927, issue. It already shows a profit of $1,620 if only 10 shares of each was purchased. PRICES TURN DOWNWARD IN STOCK MARKET

ST NEW YORK, March 30 (P)—The stock market opened without any definite trend today, fractional gains fairly balancing slight recessions.

United States Steel, General Motors and du Pont were among the prominent stocks a shade off in the initial trading, while Bethlehem Steel, General Railway Signal and several railroad shares opened slightly higher. Special buying operations contrasted with a renewal of short selling and liquidation which affected many active issues, especially the oils. Pan-American Western B started off with a sale of 8000 shares at 19, an overnight drop of 7 points, due to unfavorable earnings reports. Houston Oil also was pressed down more than three points, and sharp inroads were made in American Safety Razor, International Combustion, Nickel Plate and Delaware & Hudson.

Selling Is Heavy

Selling Is Heavy

Dodge Brothers and Radio reflected recent large offerings by quickly selling off 1 to 2 points. Baldwin, after scoring an advance of a point, joined the downward movement. The selling of Dodge Brothers depressed other motor shares during the early trading. Early strength was displayed by Missouri Pacific, Erie and A. M. Byers.

Foreign exchange opened easy, with demand sterling quoted around $4.85 3-16, and French francs just below 3.91 cents.

Omission of the quarterly dividend on Pan American Western low 3.91 cents.

Omission of the quarterly dividend on Pan American Western B aroused misgivings over the permanency of dividend disbursements on other shares whose earnings have been disappointing, and caused large offerings for both accounts. Acute weakness also continued in a umber of issues which have recently een sold freely because of special con-derations.

Dodge Brothers preferred, Wilson & Co. preferred, Commercial Solvents B, and Pressed Steel Car dropped 3 to

The renewal rate for call loans was nchanged at 4½ per cent.

Uneven Bond Movement

Prices continued to move irregularly upward in the bond market today, with convertible liens holding the center of interest. Erie D 4s were out in front with a gain of more than a point, with the convertible there was heavy accumulation of International Telephone convertible 51/4s.

International Telephone convertible 5½s.

The new Chicago, Burlington & Quincy 4½s, listed on a when issued basis, continued to attract investors at a premium over the offering price. Louisville & Nashville unified 4s also gave a good account of themselves, while Eric general lien 4s were inclined to heaviness.

Aside from some buying of American Writing Paper 6s, and profit-taking in International Merchant Marine 6s, there was relatively little activity in the industrial group.

Foreign issues were firm, but commanded a minimum of attention.

Federal Government issues sagged slightly.

LONDON STOCK

LONDON, March 30—The stock market was quiet today, with prices irregular. Oils were better, with Mexican Eagle and Lobitos in demand. Industrials and textiles were somewhat heavy, with the stock of Whiteleys in demand, following the merger with Selfridges. Rubber issues wer quiet. Home rails ere heavy. South American rails were mixed.

Royal Dutch ws 31 5-16, Rio Tinto
40% and Courtaulds 5%.

The gilt-edge division was steady.
Foreign issues were quiet, with Chinese slightly better. There was a further good demand for French issues.

Australian and Belgian loans were firmer.

WHEAT MARKET SLIGHTLY HIGHER CHICAGO, March 30 (AP)-Influence

CHICAGO, March 30 (P)—Influenced by upturns at Liverpool, wheat averaged a little higher today in the early dealings here. Favorable domestic crop conditions however, tended to check advances.

Starting unchanged to %c gain, Chicago wheat fluctuated within narrow limits. Corn, oats and provisions were also firm, corn opening at %c off to %c up, and subsequently showing some rise all around.

Opening prices today were: wheat—May 1.34½@%: July 1.29%@½; Sept. 1.27½@%; corn—May 72½@%; July 1.27½@%; July 44%; Sept. 80%; oats—May 44%@

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

SALES SMALL Large Operators Holding Out Firmly for Prevailing Rates

Sales were small in the packer hide market last week, amounting to less than 30,000 hides. Hide receipts during the current month have been less than in March, 1926, and as surplus stocks are limited the larger operators are holding out firmly for the established rates.

There was evidently a good volume of business to be had just under prevalling rates. Light cow and steer hides were in fairly good demand, and there was also some call for branded hides. At the close of the week there was some active bidding for ex-light native steers, ex-light Texas and native steers, ex-light Texas and native steers, ex-light Texas and steer and chicago city calf skins are slow of sale, with prices easy on sizable lots. About 8000 February-March packer skins sold at 17c. A lot exceeding 30,000 March also moved at 17c. With these sales were a small lot of southern skins which sold at 16½c. Cities were dull at 16½c. BANKERS URGED TO ADOPT NEW METHODS

TO GET BUSINESS ST. LOUIS, March 30—That the average savings account in the banks of the country is steadily declining, despite the fact that the national income has never before been equaled, is due largely to the fact that bankers have not kept pace with the trend of the times, Gaylord S. Morse of the State Bank of Chicago declared in an address before the Mid-West Savings Conference here.

"We bankers," he said, "must adopt more up-to-date and scientific sales and advertising methods. Our banks are greatly in need of merchandising minds."

minds."

The influences largely responsible for the shrinkage in the average savings deposit, according to Mr. Morse, are: The growth of building and loan associations; the remarkable increase in the volume of life insurance; development of customer and employee ownership; the growing practice of bond investment by investors small and large; absorption of funds by real state developments; the spread of intensive selling methods among all industries; and the higher standard of living which decreases the surplus available for savings.

DIVIDENDS

United States Smelting. Refining & Mining Company declared the usual quarterly dividend of 87½ cents a share on the common stock and the regular quarterly of 87½ cents a share on the preferred. Gilchrist Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share, payable April 30 to stock of record April 15.

SUPERLATIVES

JUPERLATIVES

Irish Statesman (Dublin): We suppose it is part of the charm of Ireland that we exist emotionally in superlatives. We either have the finest peasantry in the world or the worst and most inefficient. Our roads are either the most neglected in Europe or the best as they have just been proclaimed by the secretary of the Ministry for Local Government. Our finances are either in tary of the Ministry for Local Government. Our finances are either in a state of bankruptcy or they are at one and the same time in a better state than any other European couhtry. Our ministers can either hold their own with any contemporary statesman or else they are worse than any one would pick up casually in the streets.

It is this use of superlatives which makes the average man uneasy. He is never confident when the painting is bright that it is true, or when the blacks and grays of speech are laid on thick that there may not be something in it. Probably if our papers had not to compete with each other and journalists were not so led to key the instruments of language up to more than concert pitch, we would have much more of that confidence which so many of our visitors have noticed is lacking, and wondered what was the cause, because to the visitor we do not anwondered what was the cause, be-cause to the visitor we do not ap-pear to be particularly abnormal, but in fairly good if quite common-place circumstance.

Portland Oregonian: Princeton youngsters are not permitted to have automobiles, so they take to roller skates. It doesn't even seem to have occurred to anybody to walk.

GREEK

The (London) Times: Ultimately every language, whether supposedly "dead" or not, must assert its merits. There is giving as well as taking. People have got into the habit of talking about Latin and Greek as "dead." They are apt to forget that ancient Greek is a living influence, as a language. to many more men as a language, to many more men and women today than it was in the time of Plato. It is still peculiarly valuable for scientific purposes. Has it not given to everyday life its very latest "graphs" and "phoues"?

Los Angeles Times: If report is true baseball will be introduced on a grand scale in Rome this year. Probably the next thing we shall hear about it will be that Mussolini is to be umpire, pitcher, catcher and man at the bat.

India Today

T IS a commonplace to say that Asia is once more on the move and that Kipling's dictum that East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet, is true no longer. But Asia is not a unity and the process of change is going on at a very different pace in the various parts of the largest continent in the world. Northern Asia is controlled by Bolshevist Russia. Japan is a modern western state. Persia has reverted to an almost medieval absolutism, coupled with the most modern economic and financial methods. Tibet is still in the hands of the lamas. China is in the middle of the turmoil of political reconstruction. Siam is adapting itself to western methods under its traditional forms of government. India, after the excitements of noncooperation, is moving steadily toward the evolution of a constitutional system of gov-

The change which has come over the Indian situation in the last year or two is very remarkable. At one time it seemed as if the dream of those who believed that it would be possible to make the transition from an autocratically governed India to one in which the Indian people had taken control over their own affairs, by constitutional and not by revolutionary means, was doomed to disappointment. The high hopes of the men who had issued the declaration of 1917, drafted the Montagu-Chelmsford report, and drawn up the Constitution of 1919, based on that report, seemed to be destroyed by the queer mixture of fierce antiwesternism and nonviolent pacifism which swept over India as the aftermath of the Great

At the elections of 1921 the movement of revolt was at its height. To the exalted and mystical nationalism inspired by Mahatma Gandhi practical considerations seemed of no account. British control must be swept away instantly and without considering what alternative government was to be provided for a country of 325,000,000 people, because the British connection, so it was claimed, was the means whereby the Indian people were being corrupted by the materialism of western capitalistic and imperialistic civilization. The method of effecting the separation, however, was not to be the traditional method of violence and rebellion but nonviolent non-cooperation with the Government, so that it should collapse and quietly disappear for want of support. Therefore, the Swarajist Party abstained from the elections of 1921 altogether.

The only result was that the liberal co-operationists were returned and the new diarchical Constitution began to function in a normal way. Inasmuch, however, as the Swarajists were by far the most powerful political force in the country it was by no means sure that the new Constitution would become the channel through which the political life of the people would flow. It seemed possible that the Swarajist parties might organize a congress system which might challenge its authority in the land. However. the Government pursued the even tenor of its way and by the time the elections of 1924 were held the Swarajists had been forced to alter their tactics. They were already beginning to lose ground as being impracticable people. So decided to contest the elections with the object of entering the legislatures and then destroying the Constitution by wrecking it from within. They won a great many seats, but only in Bengal and the central provinces were they able to bring dyarchy to a standstill and force a return to the older autocracy as the only means of carrying on the government.

The recent elections have seen yet another change. Between 1924 and 1927 the prestige of the Swarajist Party rapidly waned, while communal tension between Hindus and Muhammadans rapidly grew. The very ideas about liberty and democracy which had produced the Swarajist movement against the control by Great Britain awakened opposition among the 70,000,000 Muhammadans to the idea of being voted down by the 210,000,000 Hindus and aggravated the traditional feuds between the two religions. And the barren outcome of the Swarajist policy of mere negative obstruction, at a time when India badly needed constructive reform in every department of its life, had alienated popular support from the old extremist policy. Though attempts were made to inaugurate a united and moderate national party for the purposes of the election, they came to nothing.

The elections reflected these facts. The Muhammadans have tended to form a separate group. The Swarajists have inclined more to the position of the Liberals and the Responsive Co-operationists and have even altered their name to that of the Congress Party. The extent of the change may be seen from the fact that since the elections it has been possible to recommence the working of the Constitution, both in Bengal and the central provinces, while the refusal of the Swarajists to accept office is manifestly growing less resolute every day. It now looks as if the method of constitutional progress has definitely triumphed over that of the revolutionary short cut. And this is all the more important because a Parliamentary Commission must proceed to India in 1929 to examine the working of the Reforms Act of 1919 and to advise whether, in the light of actual experience of the working of the Constitution, the time has come when a further advance toward self-government is possible.

For Better Lawyers

AUTHORITATIVE announcement has been made on behalf of Yale University, the spokesman quoted being the acting dean of the College of Law, that no more than one hundred students will be admitted to that department as members of the next first-year class. This statement was made in the course of an address in which the acting dean, Robert Hutchins, deplored the practice of turning out what he declared to be "a flood of poor lawyers," for which he took occasion to call the universities and colleges of the United States to account.

The announced policy is convincingly defended by Mr. Hutchins by reference to the fact that those in charge have been compelled to choose between giving inadequate preparation to large numbers, many of whom would not make cred-itable members of the bar, and giving the best possible preparation to a smaller number, all of whom should make creditable members of the bar.

Evidently the step has not been taken hastily or without a full appreciation of the results. As to the wisdom of the course announced, it is believed that members of the bar generally will agree that it might well have been resorted to long ago, and by other institutions as well. As to the propriety or advisability of applying similar restrictions to college entrances as a whole, there is likely to be a greater divergence of opinion than as to the apparent necessity of limiting the mass production of so-called specialists who are but inadequately fitted to specialize in the

It may be insisted, perhaps, that the decision reached by Yale has been prompted and encouraged by bar associations in the hope of estab-lishing or perpetuating a professional or cultural monopoly. But there is a deeper and more important significance than would thus be made to appear. No secret is made of the fact that the requirements for admission to the bar have long been too low to insure the high standard which is demanded. The results are observable in almost every court throughout the length and breadth of the land. Graduates from law schools go out into the world with diplomas which certify that they have been taught the theory of the law. At present they are, at least in the larger and more popular colleges, denied actual personal contacts with teachers and lecturers, and are unfamiliar with the rules of practice and

The lawyer, immediately upon his admission to the bar, becomes, automatically, an officer of the courts in the jurisdiction where he is recognized. His position is one somewhat above that of the lay citizen, his warrant being the supposed possession of superior knowledge and experience. Because of this, the law colleges and law schools are charged with a responsibility which cannot be carelessly regarded or lightly assumed. It is from their graduates that the ranks of members of the bar are filled and replenished. It is a specious evasion for the responsible directors of such institutions to seek to show that a high percentage of those to whom degrees have been awarded never actually engage in the practice of their professions. That argument tends to weaken their contention that instruction should be given to all comers, because it is, as Mr. Hutchins shows, impossible to give highly specialized training to the large classes. The standard of quality can be raised only by limiting the number of those to whom instruction is given.

As to Evacuating Rhineland

TF GERMANY fulfills the conditions of the Treaty of Versailles, the allied troops, which are entitled to remain in the German territory of Rhineland, may be withdrawn at an earlier date than 1935. Dr. Stresemann has definitely announced that he intends to ask that this provision of Article 431 shall be operative. He takes the view that Germany has fulfilled the required conditions, and that therefore the maintenance of allied troops in Rhineland is un-

In June the whole matter will be discussed in its juridical aspect. Hitherto the chief argument of Germany in favor of evacuation has been the incompatibility of the Locarno Pact with the system of coercion. Now the legal argument is added to the logical arguments. Several precedents, known particularly to France, for evacuation at an earlier date than is laid down by treaty, are cited, and the question is asked, If France and its allies do not retire from Gertheir purpose is not to safeguard their rights under the Treaty, but to disannex, in a certain measure, the Rhineland from the Reich?

There it is, say the Germans, in black and -the promise that evacuation shall be effected when the conditions are fulfilled. There were two principal conditions. One was that Germany should make reparation; the other was that Germany should conform to the armaments clauses of the Treaty. Now, say the Germans, the Dawes Plan constitutes a settlement of the reparations demands; and the Allies in removing the Interallied Commission of Military Control from Germany acknowledges that its task is completed.

To this, those Frenchmen who oppose evacuation reply that France is satisfied neither on one count nor on the other, for, it is claimed. the Dawes Plan does not insure payments, and as for Germany's disarmament, this is decidedly an open question.

Germany can make effective answers to these affirmations. There cannot be any necessary connection between the full payment of reparations and the occupation of Rhineland. The treaty-makers foresaw as a maximum period of occupation fifteen years. They also foresaw as a minimum period of payments thirty years. In fact, no time limit is fixed for German payments, and if they are, as the French urge, linked with French payments to the United States and England, they must extend over a period of sixty-two years. Surely there is no question of keeping troops in Rhineland for sixty, or even thirty years, and therefore there can be no possible connection between occupation and actual payments. The acceptance by both sides of the Dawes Plan, is from the viewpoint of occupation, a sufficient settlement. As for disarmament, it is idle to quibble about the strict fulfillment of the allied conditions. It is surely enough that for practical purposes control has ceased, and Germany has been admitted into the League of Nations, after an acknowledgment that it is no longer recalcitrant. This admission implies that Germany has placed itself in conformity with the Treaty.

There is still another objection raised by France. While it is true that the Allies recognize the possibility of an earlier evacuation, they do not pledge themselves to retire, and another article of the Treaty specifically gives to France the right to stay until it is thoroughly satisfied of its security. Frenchmen have even stated publicly that under this article France might, if it pleased, remain forever. How is France to be satisfied of its security? Originally there was a Triple Pact by which France was assured of American and English help in the event of a German aggression. That pact was never ratified. Therefore France must find other guarantees, and the greatest guarantee against a Franco-German war is an allied army in Rhineland.

n Rhineland.
In such a dialogue Germany could properly retort that the Locarno Pact, which contains a promise of territorial integrity, gives France everything it asks. In addition to the Locarno Pact, there is the general insurance against war of the League of Nations.' There is the unilateral disarmament of Germany, while France has an immense army. There are the special engagements of England, and there are the special treaties which France, perhaps con-trary to the Covenant, has antered into with the central European nations. What more, then, does France require? France, after eight years of peace, suddenly discovers that its eastern frontiers—which Germany has undertaken to respect-need protection; and M. Painlevé has announced that he must build fresh fortresses along the frontier. The army must also be reorganized, and indeed preparations made for the eventual mobilization of the whole nation-men, women and children, raw materials, factories and capital. This calls for considerable time, and evacuation must be postponed until these precautions are complete.

If France wishes to stay in Rhineland, doubtless all kinds of arguments can be found. But they are not convincing. They give the impression of insincerity. They appear to be excuses and pretexts. Juridically as well as politically, Germany appears to have reason on its side, and against this combination of legality and logic France would be ill'advised to protest. The probability is that France will not protest, unduly, and that evacuation will, before the year is out, be an accomplished fact.

Putting Distilleries to Good Use

TN THE Massachusetts Issue, published by the Anti-Saloon League of the State, is an article republished from the Inspection News, Retail Credit Company, and written by M. E. Wetherbee, manager, Peoria, Ill. It is entitled "Distilleries Give Place to Bigger Industries," and covers a subject that must give those who are open to conviction on the prohibition question reason to pause. When the Volstead Act was passed, one reads, it meant a step toward the realization of an ideal, but for the city of Peoria it threatened industrial extinction. For that city was, at one time, the second largest distilling center in the United States. Hence when prohibition went into effect the principal industry of the city was that of making liquor.

The immediate results of the reform were not unexpected. Large numbers of men were thrown out of employment and families started to move away from the city. Hence the outlook did not appear very bright, for from this city which had been enjoying prosperity the source of that prosperity had apparently been taken away overnight. It is more than welcome news, therefore, that Peoria has come out of its predicament a bigger and a better city than it ever was, and the transformation came about in just the way that often the way out of difficulties can be accomplished: by making use of what was immediately at hand.

On the sites of the old distilleries, therefore, are now found new industries, and some of them bid fair to become the largest in the section of Illinois in which Peoria is situated. Thus one distillery has become a prosperous milling company, another a company manufacturing solvents, and others concerns making oil products, oxygen, acetylene, and so on. All of them, moreover, are doing a large business, and the majority of them a far larger one than was the case in the fabled "good old days." But here is perhaps the most significant statement of all, published as the concluding paragraph of the article in question:

I am able to see a difference in the appearance of the people since I carie here two years ago. They dress bet-ter, they look happier, more alert and more "citified," if you will. And those thinking people of the city are glad that prohibition came along, made them give up their principal industry, but also made them find something to replace it so that now they can say, not "Peoria, distilling center," but "Peoria, industrial center."

"Encouraging" the British Film Industry

[Mr. Cadett of the London Times is the first holder of the Junior Walter Hines Page Newspaper Fellowship, which provides for a year of travel in the United States. Mr. Cadett is contributing a series of articles to The Christian Science Monitor during his stay in Boston.]

A appeared in The Christian Science Monitor on Wednesday last, the British House of Commons has passed, in the second reading, a bill which seeks to encourage British "movie" houses to exhibit a set proportion of British-made films. It is not quite clear whether the "encouragement" referred to in the message is to be expressed in terms of legal command, or mere cajolery; but the measure is symptomatic of a new public attitude toward an undoubted fact—the fact that for a considerable time the American producer has completely and effectively monopolized the British, and, indeed, the imperial market. The truth of such an assertion, if it were not borne out by the fact that legislation has apparently become necessary, would be amply proved in the figures accessible. Something over 90 per cent of the total of films shown in Great Britain are of American origin; of the remainder, France, Germany and Italy take their fair share. Indeed, it may fairly be said that, from the producing point of view, the British film industry has for some time been constricted. nonexistent.

Many reasons for this condition have been adduced, some of them more convincing than others. It has been said, with a certain amount of justice, that where Hollywood counts more easily its sunless days, we in England find a cloudless sky a matter for some self-congratulation In some measure, the climatic dice are undoubtedly loaded

On the other hand, films are by no means entirely composed of exterior scenes, and at best this reason can only be auxiliary and partial, more especially as American pro-ducers do not hesitate to film scenes on the continent of Europe, which at least is as accessible to us as to them Lack of capital is another explanation frequently given.

This is considerably nearer to the main cause, and actually involves it. It involves, moreover, a vicious circle of considerable importance. British capitalists lacked the imagination or the courage to go on spending their money, and British films consequently suffered in quality and quantity; and as the films were bad and remained so for the cause just stated, capital became even more wary.

The final strangulation of the British producing industry was caused by American competition. In other words, to state the matter very plainly and simply, your films were better than ours. It was a fair fight in most respects, and the weaker went to the wall, as is practically always the case. It is not intended here to discuss in detail the comparative technical or artistic qualities of the British and American producer. That is a matter of diverse opinion one which may well be left to the mass of experts, each of whom has in the past seemed to assign different reasons for a fixed result. The essential fact is that the British public preferred American films.

Once the monopoly was established, however, the condition was not merely static. The longer it continued, the stronger it became, while the chances of a British recovery became steadily less. In the first place, the increasing prosperity of Hollywood naturally meant that me was available for further extension of the industry

This extension did not simply signify that more lavish and exotic productions could be launched; there was the additional very serious factor that the American industry, with the vast wealth at its command, could and did draw the cream of literary, dramatic and directorial talent of the world, including Great Britain, into its service. It was, in other words, at once your gain and our loss. The position was, and is, acute. The longer its duration, the more difficult the remedy.

Mobody wishes to deprive the British public of what it wants. There are, nevertheless, certain aspects of the existing monopoly that deserve attention. Some are curious, some amusing, and some actually harmful, more especially CCORDING to an Associated Press message which in the imperial sense. It is, for example, a droll business that many British people, more especially the children and members of the working classes, should be more con-versant with certain phases of American life than of that of their own Nation

There is no great tinge of exaggeration in the statement that many British children would derive scarcely more novelty from landing in New York than from a visit to Westminster Abbey. Long before the magnificent skyline of Manhattan stood athwart the horizon, its towers would have been flashed on the screen before their eyes. Incidentally, the statement of the screen before their eyes. dentally, though it is rather your own business as to how you represent yourselves, American life is not always shown in its more desirable phases.

Most curious of all, however, is the fact that very often the District child.

the British child has to depend upon American interpreta-tion for its knowledge of the activities of the leisured classes among its own people. There is a certain responsi-bility involved, as will at once become apparent when it is pointed out that social unrest is apt to thrive upon scenes that show the male members of the gilded aristocracy breakfasting in evening dress vis-à-vis their tiara-lad

But by far the most disquieting effect is to be found beyond the seas. Notably in India, productions are shown which bring the white men into dangerous as well as undeserved contempt and ridicule. In the first place, the Indian tends to accept what he is told absolutely literally, and what the Occidental would discount as exaggeration for the sake of drama he sets down to the discredit of his rulers; for, in the second place, he recks little of nationalities. Seeing white men upon the screen, he associates them immediately with his rulers. Not, of course, that it would be fair to take the film as characteristic of American life; but if one is to be libeled, one prefers to do it oneself. It is more than probable that the British revolt against this celluloid imperialism has been hastened by the tactics of some producers. For a long time there have been com-plaints against the "block-booking" system, by which, in order to secure a picture that he does want, the renter must take many that he does not want, often before they have even been produced. That is not merely greedy; to be frank, it is also iniquitous.

There will very naturally be considerable discussion, both at home and abroad, as to the advisability of the proposed legislation. Any expression of opinion can only be personal, and it must hinge upon the individual conception of the film.

There may be many who regard film production as an art. So it is. The supporters of this view may contend with a great deal of justice that a nation has come to a pretty pass when it legislates against art, imposing national barriers upon so essentially an international cultural ex-pression. As well, they will say, place an embargo upon pression. As well, they will say, place an embargo upon the works of foreign painters or novelists.

Some, on the other hand, will contend that it is a business, an industry. So it is. The place that it holds in the American industrial scene is surely convincing enough. On the strength of this unquestionable premise, the land of tariffs can hardly grumble as a dose of its own medicine. Somewhere between the two extremes lies the truth. It is at once a branch of the arts—though all is not art that comes from Hollywood—and a gigantic industry. If the one certain British virtue, the genius for compromise, has not yet disappeared, it is yet possible that we will do justice to ourselves without harm to others. One thing at least is certain: it may be possible to revive the industry by legislative measures and place it on a firm footing, and there is every hope of it; but sooner or later it will have to fend for itself. Then, if our films are as good as yours, or better, they will continue; if not, it is a waste yours, or better, they will continue; if not, it is a waste of good time and money

"The Correction of Child Lawbreakers"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Your editorial entitled "The Correction of Child Lawbreakers" suggests that I should call to your attention and that of your readers again the fact that a way has been found by which crime can be checked so early in child life that at the age from fifteen to twenty there will be practically no cases for Judge Whitaker's court, Statistics show that about 2 per cent of the entire population of the United States are thieves, highway robbers and other criminals—about 2,400,900. There are 65,000 forgers in the United States. Fifty-one per cent of these are college graduates. Apparently, 2 per cent of the boys throughout the country will break the windows in vacant houses, will steal fruit and tools from their neighbors, will deface walls and do other things criminal tendency. Ninety-eight per cent of the little girls and boys instinctively try to stop the 2 per cent.

girls and boys instinctively try to stop the 2 per cent.

There is only one way that occurs to them—to tell some older person. Throughout the United States and Canada, the British Isles and Europe, throughout Asia, and apparently the rest of the world, as a rule there is but one result. The child who "tells" is punished with a frown, and denounced as "a tattletale and sneak," and told to tell on himself but not on others. This stupid, criminal phrase protects and adevelops the stream of 2 per cent that starts in early childhood, flows uninterrupted, by reason of this false belief, through childhood, youth and adult life and empties into the prisons and the great reservoir of 2,400,000 adult criminals.

Just as soon as American citizenship is offered to the

Just as soon as American citizenship is offered to the pupils of a school, by means of the method of child-citizenship in school republics, the children who are in the stream of 2 per cent of the criminally inclined instantly come out of that stream and accept the responsibilities of true and loyal American citizenship, and are more insistent than the others that the laws shall be obeyed. They are generally especially energetic, and use their energy of thought and action for the general good. Thus the stream of crime is checked.

Is it not worth while that editors and all others who have any sympathy for the children of America and the rest of the world should wake up to these facts and do what may be in their power to support this work of organizing school republics and help in its development? For the United States Government I have put the school republic in operation in some thousands of schoolrooms. The Japanese Government, Argentina and a number of other governments have authorized the use of the method in their schools. They have authorized but not required it, except Argentina and Cuba. Gen. Leonard Wood had me put it into operation in all the schools of Cuba, and Argentina, having used it for four years in a number of schools, adopted it for use in all her schools, in 1908. We can take it any place in the world, with its practice of the Golden Rule. It is scarcely anything more than a question of money for clerical work, printed matter and postage.

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In the Monrow recently there appeared on the editorial page an article entitled "On Being Someone Else," by V. S. P. "The Art of Being What You Are" To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor:

I read with great pleasure the article in The Christian Science Monitor on "The Art of Being What You Are."

There may be many readers of your paper who have spent holidays with the Co-operative Holiday Association, or the Holiday Fellowship, in the British Isles. Members holidaying at these centers always sing songs when tramping the countryside. When making reservations each member is provided with the "Green Song Book," which contains such numbers as: "For the strength of the hills we bless Thee," "The Mountaineer's Song," "The Moorland Breeze," "The Tramp's Song," "Camping Song," "Howers of the Wild Wood," "The Ash Grove," "Let the hills resound," and, finally, "Adieu."

The holidays provided by these associations are doing much toward teaching city folk to love the countryside, and paper and refuse are never found in the wake of these trampers.

Less Drinking in Chicago To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

As a Chicago street car conductor, let me say in my opinion that the Eighteenth Amendment is a good thing.

One of our worst twenty-four hours in the year in saloon days was St. Patrick's Day, March 17; but on that day this year I was working my run during the afternoon and evening, and did not see a person who was under the influence of liquor.
